

Latimes.com | Entertainment News

Submit Events | Advertise | Print Edition | Archives | Help

search calendarlive.com

March 7, 2007

E-mail story | Print | Most E-Mailed

ADVERTISEMENT

THEATER & DANCE

News & reviews
Opening this week
Critics' choices
Also recommended
Lewis Segal
Charles McNulty

ART & MUSEUMS
BOOKS & TALKS
FAMILY & FESTIVALS
MOVIES
MUSIC
NIGHT LIFE
RESTAURANTS
THEATER & DANCE
TV & RADIO

Daily Calendar
Calendar Weekend
Sunday Calendar

Weather: 5-day
Check Traffic
Make a Reservation
Dating / Personals
Map it! / Get Directions
Contact Us

PARTNERS

OpenTable.com

MARKETPLACE

classifieds and more

- Careers
• Cars
• Homes
• Rentals
• Times Guides
• Recycler.com
• Newspaper Ads
• Grocery Coupons
• Personals

DANCE

An appreciation of tapper Alfred Desio

A memorial performance for the famed dance instructor had toes tapping.

By Howard Blume, Times Staff Writer

Looking out at the crowd gathered in front of him, dancer Channing Cook Holmes struggled to describe the singular magic of his late mentor, Alfred Desio. But he couldn't recall what he intended to say as he stood fighting back grief, clad in a neat gray suit, smart yellow tie ... and stocking feet.

So he slipped on a pair of shoes and started dancing.

ADVERTISEMENT

He has his flaws

Let the Games Begin with the PACIFIC LIFE OPEN! MARCH 5-18, 2007 VISIT: PacificLifeOpen.com CALL 866-272-1260 CLICK HERE PACIFIC LIFE OPEN

That's what happens at a memorial for a tapper.

On Sunday, Holmes and about 150 other people answered the call of their personal pied piper one last time and trooped to Zipper Hall at the downtown Colburn School, where Desio, 74, taught life as well as tap before succumbing to cancer last month. Like me, they came to remember not only a great hooper and instructor but also a friend.

A onetime child prodigy back East, Desio enjoyed a solid Broadway career before moving to Los Angeles and making his name as a teacher and performer — and as the guy who figured out how to enhance live tap sounds with a synthesizer in real time, a brilliant engineering feat that became part of the movie "Tap." That innovation, of which he was ever proud, will be regarded by some as Desio's unique legacy.

But to my mind, the dazzling sound effects somewhat obscured the purity of his virtuoso dancing. He ranks among the most technically precise and dexterously advanced tappers I've ever seen.

Those in attendance Sunday got a sweet taste of Desio's dancing on a tape, courtesy of Louise Reichlin, his widow, who herself runs a modern dance troupe. Among the gems was "Brandenburg Boogie," a hip arrangement of Bach that Desio choreographed into a classic. And there were selections from "Caution, Men at Work: TAP," his answer to Australia's Tap Dogs.

Sunday's event quickly became a live show, a gratis Desio alumni shindig. It included 23-year-old twins Sean and John Scott, who regularly dazzle crowds on the Third Street Promenade in Santa Monica. Ten-year-old Joshua Villanueva and Rachel Rosenbaum, 14, performed portions of the Brandenburg piece, just as they had with Desio during his final, gutsy performance last May.

It was true to form for Desio to extend himself in sharing his art form. He made regular pilgrimages to hardscrabble urban schools, carrying Velcro strap-on taps for demonstrations.

In memoriam (Jamie Rector / For The Times)

find a show

Theater, troupe, play title:

go

Performance space:

go

Find by category:

- Theater (larger)
Theater (smaller)
Dance
Children's Theater
Dinner Theater
Sketch, Improv
Musicals
Classical / Opera

Where? Click to sel

go

Critics Picks - Stage

Table with 31 columns (S, M, I, W, I, E, S) and 4 rows of numbers representing a calendar grid.

Theater

Meg Wolfe, friends bring a skewed universe to Highways Performance Space

A 'Tender' maze of seven Londoners' lives

Variety, brevity are smooth partners in 'Celebrate'

Now playing: Cast recordings of 'Company,' 'Happy End' and 'Spring Awakening'

Mercedes-Benz advertisement featuring a car and the text 'Experience the all-new 2008 C-Class Starting at $31,975 Includes $775 destination fee.'

Advertisement with the text 'Picture yourself.' and a photograph of a woman's face.

His own performing ensemble became a kaleidoscope of ethnicities and backgrounds.

One parent spoke of the utter, attentive respect he would show the youngest children.

The mothers and fathers of first-time students would watch — perplexed, amazed — as Desio sometimes taught an entire class without saying a word. He'd start moving with a certain cadence, a discernible repetition. Pairs of clattering feet did the same. If he added a brush, so did they. Then the music would change. He'd start clapping, then stop after three counts. So did they.

"I probably do it that way to not get too involved with describing things," he said a few years ago, "but to try to sharpen a student's visual skills — to be able to look at something and duplicate it, or listen to something and duplicate it."

Later in the class, he'd often spread out string instruments, drums, castanets, blocks and keyboards and let the children discover musicality.

When his students approached adolescence — and developed attitude — Desio readied for war. His patience grew short, his demands long. But he was fighting for them, to get them to the other side as gifted dancers and responsible adults.

"I won't give them an inch," he said, especially if they wanted to join his company, the Colburn Kids.

"To the girls, it's 'Knock it off with the bare midriff.' To the boys, it's 'No belts hanging off in front of your pants.' If I see a nose ring and multiple earrings, I'm going to comment on it."

Ever the perfectionist, he'd sometimes lose his patience with me too, despite my generally solid adult behavior. But he also treated me to stories. He'd show me the stash of tap shoes he kept for needy students and his cache of obscure metal taps from generations ago, which he collected for his own amusement.

It was hard to imagine anything slowing down this slight, diminutive, seemingly ageless athlete.

"We never looked back," Reichlin said at the memorial. "Only present and forward."

Indeed, for many on hand, the show/ceremony could never be simply about Desio. It also had to recognize his partner in artistry.

"He and Louise together taught me the value of hard work and rehearsal, and rehearsal, and rehearsal again," said M'saada Nia, now a filmmaker, who hadn't put on tap shoes for seven years before rehearsing for this memorial with pals Gina Nicholson and Myshell Curry, now a teacher at Colburn. Nia recalled how Desio would provide her with free shoes and free lessons when she couldn't afford them.

"I have something valuable," she said, her voice breaking, looking directly at Reichlin. At that moment, she wasn't talking about tap at all. But when the time came, so did the footwork.

howard.blume@latimes.com

Continuing

Three sisters and a funeral in 'The Memory of Water'

Theater section >

Most E-mailed

He only made it look easy
Feminism and art collide in MOCA's survey 'WACK!'

The next big thing

> more e-mailed stories

NO END IN SIGHT

FOR YOUR CONSIDERATION:
BEST DOCUMENTARY FEATURE

The Best Reviewed
Documentary of the Year

Winner Best Documentary
NY Film Critics Circle
LA Film Critics Assn.
SF Film Critics Circle

Ads by Google

South OC Dance Studio

South County Classical Ballet has classes for all types and levels
www.southcountyclassicalballet.com

Salsa Boot Camp beginners

6 Hours in One Day for Beginners Make Friends, Free Food, Fun
www.learnsalsa.com

Learn How to Dance in OC

Dance School Ballet Belly Dance Cuban Salsa Hip Hop Jazz Wedding
www.prodancecenter.com

Amustela - Bellydancer

Northern VA area - instruction, performances and workshops.
www.amusteladance.com